What's happening in 2014

There will be a slight change to our Open Days in 2014, on the 2nd Sunday of each month we will be having Family History Day, the main emphasis will be doing research on your family using our information and the internet. So if you are a family researcher come along and dedicate one afternoon a month to research. Also on some of these Sundays our friends at the Adelaide Northern Districts Family History Group (ANDFHG) will join us.

Every now and then we will have short talks and displays to assist with your research and presentation of that research. On the 13th April we have Michelle Scragg from Heritage Scrapbook giving us a talk and display, she designs beautiful papers which are perfect to display your family photos on.

These event do not stop anyone popping in to have a look at the Research Centre and seeing what we have and checking out our latest projects.

Market in March

The State Elections are taking over the Dublin Institute on the weekend we would have our market we have to push it back a week to the 25th March, so have decided to call it our Belated St Patrick's Day Market. So come along and buy some goodies or even have a stall, inside will cost you $15.00 a trestle or sell some of your treasures outside for $5.00 a site. Look for more info on our site, our Facebook page and in the Dublin Dispatch

Remembering our fallen in 2014

As we head towards the Anniversary of the Gallipoli Landing in 2015, the Dublin History Group are holding events to Commemorate this significant moment in Australian history. Trees will be planted in memory of the World War One fallen soldiers from the Honours Rolls of the Hundred of Dublin and Lower Light. These will be planted along the border of the Dublin Institute by family members of the soldiers and a plaque will be put at the foot of the tree similar to the ones we did at the Dublin Cemetery. We are researching at the moment to get as much information and photos of our fallen and the ones that returned as we can. So if you could assist us it would be welcome. Another event is on May 25th as part of SA History Month we will do a display about Fight Forces Comfort Funds in particular items we have in our collection. More information to come.
